Korean Will Attend College In Lynchburg

Lynchburg, Va. May 13.- (Special to Times-Virginian) Friendship and goodwill of people half-way around the world are making it possible for a young South Korean to realize his dream of an American education.

Lee Nee Yoon, a 26-year old native of Inchun, Korea, will enroll in Lynchburg College next year as a result of efforts of the college, the Lynchburg Rotary Club, and his shipmates and friends aboard the USS Estes, on which Yoon has served since last August.

When the North Koreans invaded his homeland, Yoon, then a student at the University of Seoul, was making plans to come to the United States to take advantage of a scholarship offer from Lynchburg College. Like many others, he interrupted his education to volunteer his knowledge of Korean, Japanese, Chinese, and English languages to help American forces. He served aboard the Estes for two years as an interpreter and as liaison officer between American and ROK naval forces. In his spare time he translated letters and taught language classes to interested shipmates.

Through the generosity of those shipmates, Yoon is now en route to the United States. When he reaches California, he will be sent funds for his travel to Lynchburg, consisting of donations of Lynchburg College students, members of Student Christian Association and Association of Religious Workers.

The Rotary Club of Lynchburg is financing his room and board, and the college is offering him tuition-free scholarship, renewable upon his attainment of good scholastic work. He plans to major in business administration after receiving a general education in the ways, history, and language of the Americans.

After he completes his college work, Yoon plans to return to Korea to share with his fellow-citizens the benefits of his education.

NEWS FOR VETERANS

Veterans Administration announced that approximately 2,700 administrative employees will be dropped from its payroll by May 31, 1952, to get down to the limitation contained in the budget for fiscal year 1953, as submitted to the Congress.

The amount requested of the Congress for fiscal year 1953 was less than that appropriated for fiscal year 1952 because of expectations that workloads in certain programs, such as GI Bill education and training would not be as great.

The reduction will be nation-wide ..approximately 2,500 in field offices and about 200 in the VA central office in Washington, D. C. Excluded from the cut are employees of the Department of Medicine and Surgery who staff VA's 154 hospitals.

At the peak of its employment in February, 1947, VA had 226,131 persons on the payroll. As of March 31, 1952, the latest date for which complete figures are available, the payroll was down to 176,817 persons, including the 128,491 in the Department of Medicine and Surgery who are affected by the current reduction in force.

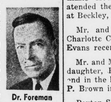
House or Home?

Lesson for May 18, 1952

ANYBODY with pencil and paper can count the number of houses on a street. Counting the homes is something else. Anybody can sell you or build you a house, any kind you can pay for; but no one can sell you a home. A house is a house the minute it is finished. A home never is finished, it goes on being built year after year.



Dr. Foreman

Edgar Guest said what everybody knows: "It takes a heap o' livin' to make a house a home." A house begins to be a home when two people move in who love each other; but it is much more of a home after the grandchildren start coming back for visits.

A house may be running down while a home is growing better and better. Besides, a home does not necessarily have to have a house.

* * *

Does the Family Live There?

ALL of us would rather have a home than a house if we had to choose. Whatever we live in—a separate house, a "flat" or "duplex," an apartment, a trailer, or what not—it can become a home—IF.

A house becomes a home in the first place only if the family live there. If all they do is to come in when there is nowhere else to go; if they seldom see one another and then almost by accident; if the place is only a lunch-counter, a rooming-house, a place to be fed and to stay in when it rains; then it is no home, it is only a house.

Animals don't have homes; they have kennels, barns, styes, stables. They can have very expensive stables too, as you can find around the Bluegrass country. But no one has ever succeeded in making a home for horses because horses have no family life, they are quite content if the roof doesn't leak and if there is enough to eat and a clean place to lie down in.

People have minds and hearts and souls, and they can know comradeship and unity such as are completely beyond the reach of even the most intelligent of animals. Living is much more than existing; and it takes a heap of living, not just existing, to make a home.

* * *

Who Runs the Place?

A HOUSE is a home if it is well run. This does not refer to paying the bills, keeping up the repairs, keeping down waste in the kitchen and so forth. A house is a home only if it is in charge of those who have the most wisdom and can best bear responsibility.

The Bible comes to us from a time and place in history very different from ours; so that we are not wise if we take just any family in the Bible and use it as a model. Solomon had 700 wives and 300 minor wives or "concubines;" Abraham had at least three.

We have progressed (thanks to Christianity) past these things. But still the Bible does give us some indispensable guidance in this matter of the home. And one of the points you will find in both Old Testament and New is that the parents ought to have the place of authority in the home,—that is, they are expected to run it.

Some families aren't run by any one; they are pure anarchies, continual rumpus and riot. Some families are run by the children, which means they are run by those with least sense and experience. "Honor thy Father and thy Mother" also means, "Father and Mother, be honorable."

* * *

Are Children a Nuisance?

A HOUSE IS A HOME if children are expected, welcomed and loved. It is not a home if children are regarded either as nuisances, as items of expense, or perhaps shut out entirely.

Now there are true homes which are of necessity childless; but a house where children would not be welcome and where they are not loved, is no home.

The parents ought to be in charge, by all means. But they ought not to be tyrants, dictators. They run the home for the children's benefit, which is quite a different thing from letting the children run it as they please. Eventually, if the parents are wise, they will send out into the world young people who have been taught to stand on their own feet. They will cut the apron-strings they will train their children so that they will be capable of founding and living happily in homes of their own.

It's just a matter of weeks now before school will be out for another year. The seniors are beginning to find out what being a senior really is now. There's that trip coming up this week-end which everyone is looking forward to. They will leave at 6:00 o'clock on Friday morning. And do not think that anyone is going to have a very hard time to get up that early. They'll all be too excited to even sleep at all. If you have noticed the seniors walking around with great stacks of books, rushing to the library every few minutes; and muttering to themselves, don't be alarmed. They're just working on those themes for Mrs. Gilbert. Everyone wants to get them finished before the senior trip so there will be nothing to bother the mind during the week-end.

The annuals for this year arrived the first of the week. All of them have been sold except for two or three. If you haven't gotten one you had better hurry to see Martha Nash. There may be one left. Your annual staff put a great deal of cert in the auditorium by the Na- work on the book, and it looks nice. You will be proud to own one.

TEMPORARY CHANGE OF LOCATION

You have doubtless observed the new addition to the old banking quarters, which is only part of the entire program of improvement and modernization.

Within the course of the next several weeks the present banking quarters will undergo drastic changes, resulting in lowering the floor to the street level and a complete rearrangement of the interior with the installation of new modern low type fixtures.

Increased volume of business for which we are deeply grateful prompted us to undertake the program, and while it is in progress it will necessarily inconvenience our customers. We sincerely hope upon its completion that we may serve you with increased efficiency and that all of us will enjoy the modernized quarters to the fullest extent.

Please bear with us while the work is in progress and if the present building does not look like business as usual——

Hooker around Fredericksburg, and he figured the time was ripe to invade the North. A contributing factor was belief that foreign aid to the Confederacy would be stepped up if Lee could win a major victory on Yankee soil. And who could tell: there was talk that the North was growing weary, too—and a bold plan might enable peace to be dictated from Philadelphia.

Lee marched up the Valley . . . sending J. E. B. Stuart far to the east to sweep around Washington, through Maryland, to join the main army in Pennsylvania. This jab looked good on paper, but in the payoff it deprived Lee of his top cavalry and when Stuart finally arrived at Gettysburg his forces were exhausted and ineffective. Anyway, Lee crossed over to invasion and held to a safe screen of high hills and mountains. He hoped to reach Harrisburg, Pa., and cut and possess strategic rail lines which were supplying the Federals.

Lee was not positive of the exact position and movements of the Army of the Potomac. Hooker was replaced on June 28 by Major General George Gordon Meade. Meade was born in Cadiz, Spain, December 31, 1815. His father was there at that time as a naval agent for the U. S., and as a business man. In 1828, the Meade family had returned to America, lived in Philadelphia, and sent the son to West Point. He graduated July 1, 1835. He had a splendid career fighting the Seminoles, and in the Mexican War received rapid promotions and moved up in rank in the War Between the States. He was an outstanding man in every way. He was brightly in appearance, and scholarly in attainments.Roman nose, pallid complexion, full beard, tall and rather spare: a powerful man of decision in emergency. He died November 6, 1872. It is the opinion of this writer that Meade was superb at Gettysburg. His big mistake was in not following up his victory more promptly.

And against Meade as the great battle shaped up was the ambient hero of Dixie, the immortal Lee. Unfortunately, at Gettysburg Lee was deprived of the genius of Stonewall Jackson. This decisive battle might indeed, have ended another way had Jackson been at Lee's side. Lee had graduated at West Point in 1829, ranking second in a class of 46. In the seige of Vera Cruz, March 8-29, 1847, Lee was a captain of the engineers, and Meade was a first lieutenant in the same service. Little did they know that in less than 16 years they would be adversaries in the greatest mass battle ever fought on this continent. Lee went on to serve as superintendent at West Point, and then to make his famous decision to cast his lot with his native state after the secession. Lee was 56 at the time of Gettysburg.

Neither side had planned to fight at Gettysburg. Lee hoped to ensnare Harrisburg and select a site for battle closer to the screen of high hills west of the town. Meade, moving on the inside of the perimeter around Washington, had chosen a battle site south of Gettysburg as offering him advantage.

On the evening of June 30, 1863, Gen. Ambrose P. Hill sent word to Lee that he was moving eastward. He had been ordered eastward from Chambersburg and had taken up position around Cashtown. He first probed into Gettysburg with patrols seeking supplies; mostly shoes. It was the hand of destiny that shaped succeeding events. Gen. John Buford was scouting for Meade and had strung picket lines along the Chambersburg pike about 3 miles west of Gettysburg. Shots were exchanged between advance elements of the two armies

The first day of the great battle was a Confederate victory.

UDC Clubs Hold Joint Meeting

The Appomattox Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and the Kirkwood-Otey Chapter of Lynchburg held a joint meeting at the McLean House here yesterday afternoon. About 70 Daughters were present, 58 from the Kirkwood Otey Chapter.

After a business session, Mrs. Calvin Robinson, president of the Appomattox Chapter, welcomed the guest Lynchburg Chapter, Mrs. J. A. Burke, Historian, gave a report for the committee on Furnishings; and Mrs. E. Carroll Smith, member of the resident office staff of Appomattox Court House National Historical Monument, since 1941, gave an informal talk and conducted a tour of the old buildings in the old court house village.

Mrs.. Smith pointed out for the two chapters the pieces of furniture purchased for the McLean House with funds raised by some of the U. D. C. Chapters interested in the authentic restoration.

Gifts donated to the McLean House were identified for the members of the organization responsible for their presence, and while many were gifts from individuals, others were from Chapters, Kirkwood-Otey having contributed a large cash donation, it was reported, and other chapters were credited with gifts.

The Appomatox Garden Club arranged flowers in the McLean House for the tour.

After the tour a tea was held on the lawn.
